

The unveiling of the memorial to Henry Timrod May the 1st was an event that the State should feel proud of, for it marked the State's appreciation at last of one of its most gifted sons.

May day in New Orleans was marked by an unusual event for the Crescent City. President McKinley who is now taking a transcontinental tour gave the city a novel sensation as he was the first president ever to visit it.

Whenever an officer of the law shoots at a man trying to flee from justice the provocation ought to be very great and even then it ought to be avoided if possible. This applies with almost equal force to shooting merely to frighten as to shooting with the distinct purpose of hitting for the instances of hitting shooting under the former circumstances have been very many.

Recent events in college athletics have caused a great deal of interest in the subject on the part of the general public, nor is it any surprise that thoughtful people are asking where is the good in such games where so many irregularities exist. We have all along been slightly in favor of the encouragement of such contests but we are changing our opinion in the light of recent developments.

Our types made it appear that our sights for the county fair were much higher than they really are in the matter of the contribution from the town council. We have all the time thought that the council ought to be very liberal in its support of the fair, but $500 was just ten times as large a sum as we had expected the council to give. We have thought all the while that they would give $50 and we feel confident that they will give this amount. Should they do so their contribution together with the subscriptions already secured in town would make $250 from the town and it is quite probable that this sum would still be increased by contributions from those who have not yet subscribed.

On our first page is a suggestion from Mr. Jennings in regard to the establishment of a soldier's home, and as is always characteristic of him he places the credit where it is properly due. In this matter Judge Buchanan is due full credit for having taken the first step. He first agitated the establishment of such a home, and it was he who first made the suggestion that if the soldier's home be established Winnsboro should offer her beautiful park as a site for the same. As suggested in our last issue it remains for the State to determine whether it will have a soldier's home but in the event it should so determine Winnsboro should be prepared to get it. We are satisfied that the suggested property would be a most desirable one for a soldier's home, and we believe that it would readily be granted for the said purpose. But to make sure of the matter, though it is of course a good while before any final action can be taken, we suggest that the town council pass a resolution showing its willingness to offer the said property for a soldier's home in the event the State should determine to erect one. While such action on the part of the council would in no measure be binding, yet it would, we believe, be readily adopted by a unanimous vote of the citizens of the town. Now while the matter of the establishment of a soldier's home is being largely discussed in the various papers of the State is the time for the council to speak out, for it would give Winnsboro an advantage to take the initiatory move in this matter.

PROF. DAVIS NOMINATED.

The State recently contained a very full article from Prof. R. Means Davis on the Charlotte speech of our junior senator. Immediately upon its appearance there came from some one at Ridgeway the following admirable suggestion:

"As a thorough student and scholar of the political history and economical questions of our State and nation, a true, able Democrat of deep and sincere convictions and a man peculiarly fitted and equipped to discuss and elucidate the important issues up for solution just at this juncture of affairs, Prof. R. Means Davis of the South Carolina College would be a worthy man to succeed John L. McLaurin in the United States senate next year. The people of the State would be instructed and improved on the questions of the day and our primary system maintained at a high standard with such men in the campaign. Prof. Davis is not a politician nor is he seeking office, but could not the State do herself timely pride by sending such a home-made, South Carolina-bred-and-raised son to represent her in the nation's great councils? His native county, Fairfield, would like to see him nominated, and what say you, Richland, to second the nomination?"

The editor of the State in commenting on the same, approved the suggestion in the following strong editorial:

"We are not in the business of candidate-making, and the time is early to offer nominations for the United States senate; but we can not help saying that our Fairfield correspondent has made a most admirable suggestion. There can be no question of the exceptional fitness of R. Means Davis for a seat in the United States senate, and all who know him will be sure that in that position he would make a record of which South Carolina would be proud. As professor of history and political economy in South Carolina college he has been for many years a deep student of the questions, political and economic, which must be dealt with in Washington, and besides being thoroughly informed he is able, and besides being able he is reliable. In complete accord with the principles of the national Democracy and eminently qualified to expound and defend them, he is also steeped in the historic spirit of South Carolina and to the best ideals of the State. So we say without hesitation that if merit and capacity alone were to be considered such a man as Means Davis could and would be chosen to succeed Senator McLaurin. But do the voters want a candidate who is not a politician, who will not flatter nor traffic in the pursuit of office? And would Prof. Davis consent to become a candidate? These questions we answer. It would be an ideal thing to take a man from the professorial desk and put him at the desk of legislation as William L. Wilson was taken. But is it possible in South Carolina under our primary system, which requires that the man must seek the office rather than the office seek the man? And would Prof. Davis give up what is practically a life position, and a congenial one, to contest for even a United States senatorship?"

"Without knowing his views or his wishes, but that the suggestion is so good that it must in conscience be commended, we present the nomination as it comes to us."

The editor of the Orangeburg Times and Democrat has summed up the whole situation in a nutshell by saying that "Prof. Davis is the most suitable man yet named for the place." In this we most heartily concur.

JENKINSVILLE ITEMS.

Jenksville, May 1st, 1901.—First and foremost I must mention the marriages that have taken place during my absence. I am surprised to know that notice of the marriage of Mr. Clarke McGill and Miss Hattie Burley both of Monticello, has not found its way to your columns 'ere this, as it took place on the 18th of February last. Weddings are not of such frequent occurrence hereabouts as not to be noised abroad—so better late than never.

On the afternoon of the 18th of April at the home of the bride's mother, Mr. John Irby and Miss Blanche Sloan were united in marriage by the Rev. Mr. Spigner. Only a few relatives and friends of the young couple were present. A reception was tendered them at the home of the groom, who at present occupies the house of Mrs. Laura Gibson near Little River. A number of useful presents were received by them, and many good wishes attend the launching of their barque on the matrimonial sea.

Mrs. Bennett Hancock died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Murphy on the 23rd ult. She had been an invalid for several years, and came here to be with her daughter during her last days. Her remains were interred in the old family burying ground in Union county. A husband and seven children survive her. One of her sons, Dr. James Hancock, is a prominent physician of Union.

Mrs. Lou Younginger, is on a visit to her home, having spent the last two weeks in Columbia where she expects to reside for some time.

Mrs. Martha Mayo, who has been living for several years with her daughter, Mrs. Rabb, at Feasterville is visiting her mother, Miss Sallie Chappell at this place.

Mrs. Lily Holley stopped for a few days with relatives here on her way to Florida not long since. She has been living at Pacolet, Spartanburg county, but since the recent death of her father, Mr. L. Hunter, decided to go to Florida where her brothers and sisters have been making their home for some time. She was accompanied by her two daughters, Rose and Estelle, aged respectively 12 and 6 years.

Miss Estelle Holley is visiting relatives in Chester. Misses Madie and Lois Chappell, Misses Stella and Eunice Ruff are at home, their schools having closed.

The school taught by Miss Eloise McMeekin near Wallaceville closed three weeks since.

The school here at Jenkinsville closed on Friday last, Mr. Thomson, the teacher, leaving on Monday following for his home in Laurens. The closing exercises were quite interesting, a program being successfully rendered by the pupils who have been organized into a literary and debating society.

Rev. E. A. McDowell expects to leave with his family in a few days to take up his abode in Ninety Six where he has charge of a church. He has other work in Union county. We are so sorry to have him go, but hope that he will be as happy and as much appreciated elsewhere as he has been here. We were all much attached to him and family.

Rev. Mr. Wells, of Georgetown, S. C., has succeeded Mr. McDowell as pastor of Little River, and Beaver Creek churches. He comes highly recommended, and we hope to prosper under his ministrations.

We can scarcely believe that again we are to have fruit after having such an abundance last year, as we are seldom so fortunate as to have it two years in succession, but the trees are laden with fruit of almost every variety. Pears will be scarce I think.

Some of the farmers are replanting cotton, so cotton seed are in demand. They have watched and hoped and waited for the sprouting of first planting until they deem it best not to longer delay.

Gardens are not very promising. Y.
